

Introducing Livestock Guardian Dogs

Howdy we want to talk to you about livestock guardian dogs. We have done a course on them. I have, or we have, our family we've had at least one livestock Guardian dog since 2007 usually more. And. We are we are sold on these animals they are absolutely essential. They are the keystone to what we do on the farm. And we want you to take this course for a couple of reasons. One is that these dogs are exceedingly useful. They can be taught to protect almost anything based on relationship with their owner. They will basically protect anything that they consider that is yours including yourself. So, they're very, very useful. But they are, on the other hand they're exceedingly unique. They don't train like other dogs. They're wired differently than other dogs. For instance, in spite of their large size and the fact they have to deal with sometimes rather large predators and they're exceedingly courageous they hardly ever show any sort of fear. They just simply train very differently. Livestock guardian dogs are ecologically friendly like you wouldn't believe. For instance, people with sheep, goats, cattle, chickens; before livestock guardian dogs were brought to this country, the basic way that they coped with coyote and other predators was to try and eradicate them. Which doesn't work too well because they multiply very rapidly. But with a livestock Guardian dog solution, you're not eradicating them. The dogs actually train those predators to stay away and they don't kill them as their 1st option. They try to keep them away. They are exceedingly useful. You need to take this course though because they are exceedingly unique. We got our 1st livestock guardian dog it was a huge learning curve for for me. I know. They don't train like other dogs. They are hard wired differently than other dogs. They are not really suited for obedience. What they do is hard wired into them. And yet, what they do is affected by relationship with their owner. And so, there's a unique way that you teach the livestock Guardian dog what you want him to do, and what you don't want him to do. We want you to take this course so that you will avoid some common mistakes that are made by people getting into them. It's just so very easy to do unless you know ahead of time. We hope that you would enjoy the course learn from it.
